DANGER 🦋 DANGER 🦋
 There is bad weather and then we have insanely bad weather. Worst wind and rain in the last four years with 25 meters per second and 35 - 45 in the gusts. In English 55 up to 100 miles an hour in the gusts. NO PERSON ON THIS PLANET IS GOING HIKING HERE TODAY. IT'S LIKE SIGNING YOUR OWN DEATH WARRANT.
 Find yourself an other activity because this mountain has spoken and it clearly is not wanting anybody up there. I hope you stay safe and come back when the weather is better.

HIKE TO KJERAG IS CLOSED
 This video will explain the conditions better than me. We have full storm with rain, and 4 degrees Celsius which means nobody will be Hiking today. Windshield factor is minus — 5 degrees. By the time the wind and rain dies down it will be too late for hiking today. Stay home or do something else with your friends and family. Life is to short and precious to be Hiking in this mountains on a day like today. See you all tomorrow which looks like a great day for hiking.

Picture taken at 930pm. Just illustrating how dark it is and the picture is much lighter than reality. This means our new cut off time for hiking is 3pm unless you have a headlamp with you.

Good morning,
 After a long discussion with the sheep this morning we have concluded that it will be a rainy day with lots of wind and at times very poor visibility. Clouds are currently at around 3200 feet and we hope they go a little higher. Not a great day for hiking, but my sheep friends say you are more than welcome to try and if you can't make it they will keep you company as long as you DO NOT feed them.
